Subject: FL Phosphate Radiological Survey

Lisa/Don/Phil:

I received some information today from HQ that indicates that there may be a change in direction of the radiological survey plans. I was told that the responsibility for the survey may be divided into two parts...a residential area and non-residential area. The State would survey the residential areas and EPA would survey the non-residential areas. I know that we had talked about expanding the survey to include the CERCLIS sites, but I don't recall any discussions about the State conducting part of the survey.

Could you look into this and give me some feedback. We're in the middle of developing a web site for the project and this change in direction would require that we make some significant changes to the web site as well as the other planning documents. It would also change the focus somewhat of our next meeting.

Any in-sight would be greatly appreciated.

Thanks, Brad
